Description:

Chimera chapter III, reference Apollodore, La Bibliotheque, Livre II, III, 1

CHIMERA revisits the myth of this polycephalic creature, as described by Hesiod, Plato, Pliny the Elder, and others. By appropriating their words, the artist weaves a new narrative that unfolds into an intimate yet universal reflection on the mother-daughter bond. Birth and life merge into a relationship that is at once fertile and conflictual, nurturing and devouring — an ambivalence that every woman carries within herself.

The texts exist in French or in English (edition of 3 altogether + 1 AP)
