Description:

Chimera chapter V, reference Plato, La République Livre IX, 588d

CHIMERA revisits the myth of this polycephalic creature, as described by Hesiod, Plato, Pliny the Elder, and others. By appropriating their words, the artist weaves a new narrative that unfolds into an intimate yet universal reflection on the mother-daughter bond. Birth and life merge into a relationship that is at once fertile and conflictual, nurturing and devouring — an ambivalence that every woman carries within herself.

The texts exist in French or in English (edition of 3 altogether + 1 AP)
